The Willamette River needs to be more thoroughly cleaned to allow the fish and habitat to recover with a long term cleanup. The current plan is far too narrow in time frame and acreage given the decades of pollution that have accumulated on river bottom. Dredging the Columbia for traffic was expensive, but the current plan is minor by comparison. More resources need to be allocated to return the river to a healthy state. Recreation, fishing and tourism can be stronger parts of our economy if we make this investment.

The current plan is far too shortsighted and a handout to the polluters.
